In his latest ballet production, Christian Spuck accomplishes the rather stunning feat of putting Leo Tolstoy's portrait of Russian social mores in the 19th century on the stage – and doing so with apparent effortlessness. Boris Mikhailov and others are featured. My history with Hawkwind is as murky as anyone that truly let the band into their hallowed cerebral bandwidth whilst following their smoke signals and oily pipes serenading the riff fuelled synth washed sunsets where dogs on strings jugglers tents and paratrooper boots were standard issue on stage and backstage.

does that just mean using natural fibers and materials: Gruppo Zegna consistently strives to see the bigger picture and therefore – equally consistently – upholds a clear social commitment. The colors and hues used for his materials could have come straight off the palette of Sandro Botticelli, the man who was instrumental in establishing Florence as an exalted center of painting in the 15th century.
