It was not the glossolalic experience alone that made Pentecostalism distinctive, but the expectant social reality in which it occurs Poloma Eerdmans, MDiv dissertation, Providence Theological Seminary.

Experience plays a role at the beginning of the hermeneutic process as presupposition. The Christian church has spent two millennia wrestling with the Biblical text under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, we ignore this past at our peril. Many in society are seeking religious expressions that value pragmatic, experiential practices and intuitive, mystical ways of knowing. Bosch, D. It believes in a supernatural God who exists outside of the closed, determinist world view of modernism. His teaching experience also includes serving schools in Washington, California, Kentucky, as well as Wheaton College in Illinois five years and Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary in Massachusetts twelve years.
