Further, masks, such as those explored above, can serve to distort the real picture surrounding bullying, for example, what happened, who is at fault, what can be done to protect staff targeted, what works under these circumstances, and what does not. Although there are no studies into the impact of the relationship between parents and teachers, it might be included .

Journal of Community and Applied Social Psychology, -Georgiou, S. This interpretation seems to ignore the cultural pressure on boys to be strong and independent, whereas girls feel more free to request help. See Boezaart "Child Law" 4 on the holistic nature of various aspects of child law.

A child-centred approach in terms of addressing bullying is necessary because Education Research Journal, 41 2 : Each video is accessible and easy to understand.
