The Tobermory Galleon. One of the reasons for that is that during the years when the language was marginalised, Scottish arts and culture still preserved and promoted Gaelic. I believe that the Parliament is supportive as well, which has been obvious to us. We suggest that such a programme commences in Scotland. I am proud to represent a part of Scotland that has such a rich tapestry of culture, which for the most part is Gaelic culture. How many of such schools teach the language as a subject?

Language and concepts may be changed to fit modern tastes, or to better describe. I think Strupag's suggestion of a very intensive 1 month course, followed by distance learning and day-schools, might work better in less populated areas.
