Shumway, N. The neck pain may move into your arms and legs and sometimes to your fingers and toes. Steve Kim Answers represent the opinions of our medical experts. It can happen when a fibromyalgia patient gets up from the chair after sitting. If left untreated, fibromyalgia may get worse for patients over time. It is not uncommon for middle-aged women to experience unpleasant electric shocks in the leg, which can be caused by a number of medical conditions or menopause. Untreated stingers can get better, but nerve damage and muscle weakness can happen when a fibromyalgia patient gets up from the chair after sitting for too long.
